Type of Data	Table Numbers
Weekly Mean Maximum Temperatures	1A to 10B
Daily Frequency Maximum Temperature 90° or higher	11A to 14B
Daily Frequency Maximum Temperatures 32° or lower	15A to 22B
Weekly Mean Minimum Temperature	23A to 33B
Daily Frequency Minimum Temperature 32° or lower	33A to 41B
Daily Frequency Minimum Temperature 0° or lower	42A to 47B
Weekly Mean Temperature	48A to 57B
Total Weekly Precipitation Hundredths of inches	58A to 67B
Daily Frequency Precipitation Received .1 to .39 Inches	68A to 77B
Daily Frequency Precipitation Received .4 to .99 Inches	78A to 87B
Daily Frequency Precipitation Received 1.00 Inches or over	88A to 97B
Total Weekly Snowfall Tenths of Inches	98A to 105B

These data were prepared to furnish detailed historical information on weather conditions for the State of South Dakota for the past 50 or more years.

Within the Great Plains weather is a significant factor limiting crop production and all farming operations, to be successful, must take weather into consideration.

The fact that South Dakota lies within the area of the Great Plains where the amount of precipitation received is at the margin of enough to support vegetation makes weather information especially important for this area.

Amount of precipitation received varies from about 24 inches in the southeastern corner of the state to about 12 inches in the northwestern. Crops that are adapted to conditions in the eastern part of the state cannot be successfully produced in the more arid portions of the state. Farm crops as well as other farming operations makes it necessary to develop farm programs and crops especially adapted to weather conditions in the various areas or portions of the state. These data will contribute materially to that end.

This report includes a part of the climatological data placed on the I.B.M. cards under the joint project by the South Dakota State College Experiment Station, The U. S. Reclamation Service and the Weather Bureau.

The climatological year starts each year with the first of March. This is done in order to have the calendar dates uniform for like numbered weeks throughout the years. As shown in the table of weekly dates the first seven days of March are considered the first week. February the 28th or the 28th and 29th as the 53rd week. To secure data for a calendar year start with week 45 for that year and go through week 53 and continue with week one through week 44. The 44th week includes the calendar dates December 27 to January 2 and is dated of the year applying to the December dates. For the calendar year 1900 the 44th week covers dates December 27, 1900 to January 2, 1901.

Temperature figures are the arithmetic mean temperature for the week. When less than four temperature observations are reported for any week the weekly mean is considered as missing and the space is left blank in the tables. Since we have no minus sign on the tabulator the credit symbol is used to indicate temperatures below zero. Also since the I.B.M. tabulator will not print zeros without a significant digit in case the mean happens to fall on zero the space is also blank.

When the total of the daily temperatures for any week happens to be below zero and between -1 and -3 the machine will print the credit symbol and leaves the space blank.

Precipitation is reported in hundredths of inches and snow fall in tenths of inches.

Tables are given as A and B for each numerical number since data are available for more years than could be listed on a single page.
